Will the EIS process consider the impact of the coal being burned at its destination? If not, it will be incomplete.

Wouldn't sooner be better than later to stop the coal burning insanity given what we know about global warming?

Why are we even having this conversation about burning fossil fuels at this hour of our destructive practices?

What if all the human potential, time and resources being spent on this proposal were directed towards making the changes we know are needed and inevitable? Stop wasting our time, coal industry! We know better and you can't fool us with you - whatever you try to put forth.
