We frequently walk our dog along Ruston way near the railroad tracks. I still remember the ASARCO smokestack. On any given day, the stack did its job to disburse pollutants to minimize their effect. However, over years of operations, the pollutants accumulated to toxic levels. I feel the cumulative effect could happen to coal trains. One could be OK, but many over years could spread toxic coal dust and diesel fumes to a harmful level. This cumulative effect needs scientific study.
